The Court Jester Opening Monologue: How are you all doing tonight—what's good, what's good everybody? So, President Joe Biden is rumored to be the first sitting president to likely lose all of his teeth while in office. You hear that Dairy Queen, soft serve is now a responsibility—not a privilege. If Biden can't keep the White House, it may come down to Bernie Sanders and Elizabeth Warren in fisticuffs over both of their environmental policies on the debate stage again for the fate of the DNC. Oddsmakers in Vegas predict it will go the distance. The most enticing part is what's on the line for the loser. If Warren loses she has to say something nice about the caucasian male population of her home state of Oklahoma, and if Bernie loses he has to say Hades is real while he gnashes his teeth on a ham sandwich. They asked me if I'd like to moderate the debate. I told them I'd rather have Margaret Sanger deliver my wife's baby. Taylor Swift's "1989" album release is taking its toll on many Swifties. Why, because now a dollar eighty-nine is their new net worth since she's been on tour. When rappers Drake and Lil Baby were asked if they wanted the COVID-19 vaccine, instead of saying "yes please", they said, "yes indeed". Akron, Ohio is now the middle school dropout capital of the U.S. So much so that LeBron James has to change his motto from "I Promise" to "Look man, I meant I never said for sure" There has been a shortage of inflatable bouncy houses for your kids upcoming birthday party. The good news is that there are plenty of elderly women at the local community rec center's underwater aerobics class. Next thing you know there's going to be an ample supply of debt collectors that actually like their job and are happy in life.
